Simplification of Your Cash Management
The Call account from Credit Suisse offers you a way to both optimize and simplify your cash management. If you have any excess short-term liquidity, you can transfer this from your Current account or Private account to your Call account. There your balance will earn interest at the current money market conditions applicable for this amount. No complicated instructions are required, and you will enjoy the advantages of a better return thanks to an interest rate that is linked to the market. A monthly account statement will keep you informed of amounts credited and withdrawals, as well as the latest account balance.

The Features of the Call Account at a Glance
• Opening a Call account is free of charge; similarly, there are no charges levied for managing the account.
• Investments can be made in CHF, EUR, USD, GBP, YEN, CAD, AUD, NOK, SEK, NZD and ZAR.
• The interest rate is dependent on the size of the investment amount held on the account. Moreover, the interest rate is set in line with 48-hour money market interest rates.
• The minimum investment amount is CHF 250,000 and the minimum transfer amount is CHF 10,000 or the equivalent in a foreign currency.
• In each case, you benefit from an interest rate set in line with the market 48 hours after the order is placed to transfer your funds to the Call account.

• As far as withdrawals are concerned, you can access your balance via your Current account or your Private account within 48 hours of instructing the transfer. In the event of partial withdrawals, the remaining balance in the Call account continues to earn interest at the relevant conditions.
• Statements for the Call account are issued on a monthly basis.
• Interest income is credited automatically to your Current account or your Private account, as determined by you in advance. Withholding tax of 35% of the gross interest amount is deducted.
• You will receive an interest and capital statement for your tax declaration at December 31 each year, or when you close the account.

Prerequisite for Opening a Call Account
You must have a Current account or a Private account with Credit Suisse in the corresponding currency.
Call Account Interest Limits – for Cash Management at Credit Suisse
The interest rate is dependent on prevailing money market conditions, as well as the investment amount in the Call account. It is applied to the entire credit balance. The different interest levels that apply are geared to the latest money market rates as well as absolute interest rates. The Call account is ideally suited to short-term investments involving amounts of CHF 250,000 and upwards.
