Conversion of Physical Certificates: Compulsory Redemption

Since March 1, 2013, bearer securities are not represented by actual certificates any more, but instead issued on a book-entry basis. Investors are no longer entitled to demand delivery of physical certificates.

All physical certificates issued in the past must be converted into book entries by June 30, 2016. Upon expiry of this deadline, all physical certificates will be subject to compulsory redemption.

Conversion

Investors holding physical certificates should contact the fund management or their bank in order to hand back the physical certificates or convert them into book entries by June 30, 2016, at the latest, in accordance with the deadline for subscriptions and redemptions stipulated in the fund document.

Compulsory redemption

The physical certificates of investors who do not contact the fund management or their bank by June 30, 2016, will be subject to compulsory redemption at the NAV (calculated as at June 30, 2016) as they may have a significant detrimental impact on the economic interests of other investors given their unknown tax status. An equivalent amount in Swiss francs has been deposited with the fund management for the certificates of the investors in question.
