Repositioning and Renaming: Credit Suisse (Lux) Risk Appetite Fund

- Date of repositioning and renaming: December 1, 2016
- New name: Credit Suisse (Lux) Multialternative Fund
- The repositioned fund will have a broader investment remit, providing exposure to additional sources of return which are uncorrelated to equities and bonds
- The repositioned fund will no longer have a benchmark
- The management team remains the same
- The management fee for the B share classes has been slightly lowered by 10 bps and the performance fee abolished for all share classes

Given the more complex market environment, the Credit Suisse (Lux) Risk Appetite Fund is being repositioned to provide exposure to additional sources of return which are uncorrelated to equities and bonds. It will now invest in a broader opportunity set, allocating assets to a diversified series of investment strategies typically employed by hedge funds.

The fund will continue to focus on generating absolute returns while avoiding large equity drawdowns. The diversified nature of the repositioned fund is expected to result in lower volatility and better diversification properties.

Are there any other changes taking place?

The repositioned fund will no longer have a benchmark.

There will be no change in the fund's management team or management fees for share classes other than the B share classes. Jonathan Wilmot will no longer provide advisory research to the management team.

What investment policy will the new fund follow?

The repositioned fund will employ a systematically influenced process to invest in a wide range of diversifying investment strategies across asset classes and trading styles.

The objective of the fund will be to manage a multialternative investment portfolio and provide investors with an attractive return profile and diversification benefits consistent with the performance of a diversified universe of hedge funds.
